

Jake and the Snake

Jake had been having a dream. In his dream, Jake saw a snake. The snake was making and baking all kinds of food. The snake wanted Jake to help make a cake, six cupcakes, a stack of pancakes, and a milkshake. They would take all of this food to a picnic. They got in the car. The snake was driving. The snake braked by a lake. Jake and the snake got out. They raked the grass. They sat and ate. Snowflakes started falling. "For goodness' sake," Jake thought, "I am eating a cake and some pancakes by a lake, with a snake, and under a blanket of snowflakes." Then, Jake was awake.
